Exchange programme

We offer exchange programmes for both Bachelor and Master students. The English taught exchange courses are offered in the first semester.

Bachelor exchange programme

The Bachelor exchange programme is a broad, critically engaged and multidisciplinary programme, combining philosophy, psychology and sociology. For example, you will study the ways people give meaning to life from a psychological perspective, and conduct research to the notion of citizenship.

In each course, academic knowledge is linked to practical skills. The lectures are interactive and you learn to work together in groups. The programme* consists of four courses, each representing 7.5 ECTS. Please visit our website for more information.

Language requirements

Incoming students are expected to be proficient in English (level B2 at minimum). The required language level can be demonstrated by means of a language test, or a declaration from the home university signed by the Erasmus+ coordinator or a representative of the Language institute.

Master exchange programme

The Master exchange programme is an interdisciplinary and practice-oriented programme that combines insights from the social sciences and humanities. Drawing on essential writings by prominent thinkers, you will explore the various societal debates encountered in occupational fields such as humanist counselling, and spiritual care, education, organisation and research.

In each course academic knowledge is paired with practical skills set in a personal and interactive environment. The programme* consists of five courses, each representing 7.5 ECTS. Please visit our website for more information.
